Bastard criminal pays with his life In the Duma a session starts; the floor is covered with the questions to be addressed. The chamber is electric, energetic and there is no rest for the deputies and their assistants. The whole of the committee, acting on the principle of "it can't be anything other than that", solemnly declares that Boris Nemtsov had been murdered, that a young man had been killed, that all the arguments which were on the table were shot down. The murderer escapes. He does not need to flee, because he is entitled to rest. It turns out that the "Trinity" is not only dedicated to the defense of the fatherland but is also capable of making pious speeches. And it is precisely these speeches which are most needed now. The media comment on the conclusions of the Duma, immediately try to ascertain the murderer. But in the Duma it is said that the man who killed this politician had been previously known to the police, that he was being followed by the police for a long time. It appears that a Caucasian with a Georgian passport, a man of an unknown origin, comes to the Moscow court and reports that he had been closely following the murderer from the time when this criminal had stood in for Marina Saikova. The police asks the investigators to check the description of the man. Nikolay Didkovsky declares that the suspect matched the description from the information given by the eye-witness who told them that a young man wearing a camouflage jacket and hat with a Russian symbol on it was walking near the German Pedagogical University. By the way, it is as if someone with an assumed identity had played such an important role in the investigation. Nevertheless the investigators are even now struggling to make the man hand over his documents. He claims, in some way, to be a prisoner of the Russian Federation and probably, like most of those who are detained in Russia, he comes to Moscow in response to specific instructions which he received via the Internet. f678ea9f9e
